Phoenix-based general construction company Linthicum promoted Vann Allan to vice president of Hawaii operations as the company continues to grow its projects in the mid-Pacific.

A 6-year Linthicum team member, Allan will be responsible for marketing, preconstruction, and construction activities for Linthicum's Hawaii projects. He will also be tasked with managing contract administration, procurement and subcontract negotiations, cost monitoring control and maintain his previous role as project manager of individual projects at Linthicum.

Allan completed the review, qualification, and testing process to become the Responsible Managing Employee (RME) on Linthicum's Hawaii license. He obtained a bachelor's degree in agricultural development with an emphasis in construction science and architecture from Texas A&M.

He recently led the project management for the new seven-story Aloft Tucson University hotel conversion built for Starwood Hotels & Resorts, the complex Kukui'ula Clubhouse on Kauai and the Tropical Garden Collection featuring plantation-style cottages located in the high-end Kukui'ula community.

Linthicum is the premier builder of high-quality custom commercial, golf and residential properties in the Western U.S. Combining exceptional architecture and design with superior craftsmanship and construction, Linthicum builds in some of the most breathtaking locations and environments in the world.

Founded in 1984, the company's work has included projects in Arizona, California and Hawaii, including the Kukui'ula Resort and Spa on the island of Kauai in Hawaii. For further information visit linthicumcorp.com.
